TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Mr. Editor:—I saw in your paper a few days ago that someone had asked you if something could be done to keep horses off the main road. Why there is a fine of $5 to turn a horse on the public road in this county, and if some of the people that use the road for a pasture both winter and summer would have to pay $5 fine for the violation of the law, they would keep their horses in and think the main road a dear pasture, for in the summer there is nothing for them to eat but dirt and in winter the straw that falls from the farmer's cart when he is hauling it for bedding. A few days ago I was on the road from Gaius Diggs' shop to Diggs P. O. and there were three mothers stationed in the road waiting for their little ones to come from school, on account of horses being in the road, and it is dangerous for a lady to drive a horse with any life, when there are horses racing up and down the road to the points I have mentioned. There is a stock law but you have to take your horse up all standing at any time from Diggs to the Haven school to keep from colliding with cows. The main road looks like a big dairy farm.

Sixty Years of Bootmaking have made the "Hub Warrior" Boot

We began making rubber boots for fishermen before many of the fishermen who read this ad were born. Every year for nearly sixty years we have been making tens of thousands of boots that would stand the roughest kind of service. And every year the popularity of the BOSTON "HUB WARRIOR" BOOT has increased, until today this brand of boot is probably growing in favor more rapidly than any other boot made.

"Hub Warriors" are made of the strongest duck, lined with the best grade of wool net, and strongly reinforced at all wearing points. Besides, they are unusually comfortable boots to wear—and very warm.

Made in all lengths. Buy a pair of them next time, and see how much sixty years' of experience means to you.
